Banco de la República (the Central Bank of Colombia) presents Cartagena and the Colombian Caribbean with the Zenú Gold Museum
On Saturday, 18 February, the Zenú Gold Museum will reopen its doors with renovated spaces and a new curation that will immerse its visitors in a history of thousands of years and in the diverse forms of amphibious life that existed on the coastline and in the savannahs of the Colombian Caribbean. The renovated Zenú Gold Museum will take visitors on a journey to perceive the interaction between landscapes and their inhabitants; the dialogue with water and land; the singing of ceramic flutes and ocarinas; and women's important place in these societies.

The renovation includes cutting-edge technologies that create a multimedia and multisensory experience, with apps incorporated into an organic museum design inspired by this region's landscape
