

To strengthen the culture of prevention, detection, and response to fraud events based on the principle of zero tolerance for illegal acts, Banco de la República presents the Whistleblower's Manual, which contains information on the mechanisms for filing wrongdoing complaints with the Bank.

The purpose of this document is to instruct about the process of filing a complaint, understood as the report by any person to this entity on the occurrence of possible irregularities, non-compliance with regulations, possible fraud situations, or violations of the Code of Conduct by employees or contractors of Banco de la República or third parties in the performance of functions or services of the Bank.

What is a complaint?

It is the report that any person may make, in fulfillment of his or her duty of solidarity, to inform the authorities of the existence of irregularities to activate the mechanisms for investigation and response.

If you detect the existence of alleged irregularities or possible fraud situations by the Bank's personnel or contractors in the performance of their duties, you may report them by following these guidelines:

Recommendations for whistleblowing or filing misconduct reports

- Present a clear, detailed, and accurate description of the events of which you have knowledge. If possible, state how, where, and when they occurred.
- Provide information on who did it, if known.
- Attach the evidence that supports your account and that allows you to guide the inquiries in case you have them.
- If possible, provide your name and address, telephone number, or e-mail address to contact you if necessary, or to keep you informed of the progress of your complaint.
- Inform if the events have been brought to the attention of another authority and indicate which one.

What if I want to make an anonymous complaint?

If you prefer to keep your identity confidential, Banco de la República respects your right to make an anonymous complaint and will examine it. In any case, you must ensure that your report is sufficiently substantiated and supported by evidence to guide internal inquiries. Please inform us if the events have been brought to the knowledge of another authority.

Protection of the identity of whistleblowers

If you choose to reveal your identity and contact details, the Bank will treat your report as confidential. Banco de la República's Security and Confidentiality Policy requires all its personnel to keep the information and documents received from whistleblowers confidential and to respect their confidential nature, as well as the handling of the complaint. Consequently, they may not publish, disseminate, comment, or discuss with third parties, copy, reproduce or, in general, use or circulate such information for purposes other than those foreseen by the Bank or the authorities, whether in printed, electronic, verbal, or any other form.

How to file your complaint?

The Bank offers you different channels to file your complaint. Regardless of which channel you use, it will be treated seriously and following the established procedures.

On the Bank's website, go to the "Citizen Services" menu and learn about the available channels:
