How to run a world-class economics department - Central Banking

An article published by Central Banking, the world's leading central banking journal, ranked Banco de la República's (the Central Bank of Colombia) research team as the best in Latin America and 14th worldwide.

This ranking is based on the publications of the researchers of each research team. The top 20 is led by six research teams that are part of the U.S. Federal Reserve System. (Federal Reserve Board and the New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, Saint Louis, and Dallas FEDs). Five others are part of the European Central Bank system (the ECB and banks in Italy, Spain, and France). And the International Monetary Fund (IMF) teams, the Bank of International Settlements (BIS), and the Bank of England.

For Banco de la República, research is fundamental to the fulfillment of its constitutional mandate and indispensable for decision-making. It also contributes to public understanding of the economy. Therefore, it has a dedicated research team and a larger group of researchers by department.

According to the Central Banking article, "good central bank research tends to be a work that says something new, exerts influence, and supports policy. To some extent, these elements can be summarized by quantitative metrics."
