Guide for Detecting Damaged Banknotes and Coins Friday, 7 June 2024 - 12:00

This guide summarizes the criteria that should help financial institutions, securities transportation companies, and users to identify the type of banknotes and coins that are unfit for circulation and should therefore be delivered to Banco de la República (the Central Bank of Colombia) to be exchanged for banknotes and coins in good condition.

1. Banknotes1.1. Soiling

A banknote is considered soiled when the entire surface of the banknote is dirty, making it difficult to check its security features. Its main consequence is an increase in the optical density of the banknotes, making soiled banknotes darker than clean ones. The following are some examples of unfit banknotes for this reason. A banknote with the same or a higher degree of soiling is considered damaged and should not be circulated:

MELANCOLÍA

TENUE, LEJANO Y MISTERIOSO RUEDE
VUESTRA MELANCOLÍA
QUE CAL VIEJA AL CIELO NOS CONDUCE.
MI ESPEJO REFLEJOS DE ESE CIELO
EN LA BRILLANTE LUNETA,
CON QUE ENLAZASTE LOS SOMBREROS LA MIRADA

LEVE CRUCIFIX DE ORO
QUE LAVE ALAS O CON RUBÍ CON SUS PALOS UNE

QUE EN LO PROFUNDO DE LA AMISTAD BRILLE.
Y QUE EN LOS REFLEJOS DE LA VIDA
SE PIERDE Y SE CONFUNDE,

VIGIL MELANCOLÍA

Banknotes that show perforations caused by tears, hooks, etc., or that have suffered the removal and alteration of one of their parts or some security feature such as thread, etc. The fraction of the banknote to be evaluated may or may not include the serial number of the banknote, but in no case should it be less than 50% of its original surface.

The following are examples of banknotes that should be considered unfit for circulation:

2. Coins

Deteriorated coins are those pieces that show darkening, folds, deformations, burns, perforations, rust impregnation or coating, or other elements that alter their appearance.

2.1. Darkening

When the stain is uniformly present over the entire surface, a coin is considered to be darkened, making it difficult to establish its authenticity. The following are examples of different degrees of this condition that will allow the identification of a coin deteriorated for this reason:

2.2. Bends and deformations

These are coins that show alterations in their shape or size due to a force applied by an external element.

2.3. Burns

An alteration produced by the action of fire and heat, by contact with certain chemical products, by electricity, by radiation, or by friction.

2.4. Perforations

An alteration caused by external elements that penetrate or pass through the coins.

2.5. Impregnation or coating of rust or other elements

An alteration caused by a chemical reaction or by the impregnation of elements in the coin, producing changes in its appearance, color, and texture.
