Blog BanRep | Climate Risk as a Constraint to Agricultural Credit Access
A recent paper published in Ensayos sobre Política Económica (ESPE), a journal of Banco de la República (the Central Bank of Colombia), examines the constraints faced by Colombian smallholder farmers in accessing credit. Among other findings, the paper presents the results of a study done by Camilo Bohórquez, Margarita Gáfaro, Karelys Guzmán, and Alex Pérez analyzing the effects of climate risk on credit access using small-scale potato producers as a case study.
